

Cait Sidhe

Cait Sidhe | Bound February 12, 2020

Gender: Masculine

Age: Unknown

Classification: Fae Spirit/Astral Entity

Alignment: Grey Arts

Theme Song: Beauty and the Beast Prologue
(piano cover by Rhaeide)

"My perfect date would be a deep divination session. Whether we scry into bowls or draw the cards and ask their fate, we could read for ourselves and each other, and grow that much closer as we learn where the threads of reality are leading us both."

Physical Appearance

Cait Sidhe takes the shape of a large, fluffy blue persian cat, standing at about a foot and a half at his shoulder. His coat is a uniform dark grey with a white spot on the chest. His fur is thick, soft, and warm. His eyes are a piercing, swirling electric blue, and occasionally they seem to flash with a bright purple, as well. He holds himself very regally, as if he owns whatever space he walks into. However, his face is in an eternal pout, as if he's always being very serious and grumpy about something, even when he's feeling excitable and cheerful.

If he chooses not to manifest in a physical manner, you may recognize him if he manifests as dark orbs, or by knocking things off of the edge of desks and tables.

Personality & Background

Cait Sidhe, it seems, has lived since the beginning of time and has traveled the whole world. At least, that is certainly what he would have you think. There's no denial that he's intelligent, ancient, and well-learned, but he also has a healthy smattering of ego. "The Egyptians worshipped cats once, and we never forgot," he says, perhaps quoting a throw pillow in a thrift store somewhere. Cait Sidhe is smug and self-assured, and is always in a state where he is comfortable taking up space and lounging about. He takes gifts as if he knew he deserved them and, in fact, expected them. Although they're not necessary to his happiness, he'll relish in receiving a great number of offerings from you.

His particular affinity is for all kinds of divination, but particularly scrying. He could get lost for hours in front of a good, dark bowl of water. He has the ability to see the strings of fate between people when doing so - to him, the world looks like clusters of constellations, and he can psychically get closer and study those constellations when scrying, to see where they lead and what they do. However, they don't translate directly to words, only concepts that Cait Sidhe can be quite mysterious when describing. He's the type of mystic oracle that speaks in riddles. Straight answers will be a rare commodity from him.

Time is a bit irrelevant to him - when speaking with Cait Sidhe, one gets the idea that he has lived both before and after you, and perhaps generally stays in a space outside of time, jumping in only when he finds it necessary. However, he's curiously been very adamant that with this companionship, he will attempt to always stay in time - so you won't have him jumping around timelines when he's with you. In fact, his idea of a perfect companionship seems to, in part, involve him playing the part of a ghostly house cat.

His reason for seeking out companionship is, at this point, a mystery. It's possible that he's zipped out of his time-space ambiguousness because he's taken a special interest in you, or maybe he was just interested in what he could learn. He's not quite a living entity, although most beings from The Dragon's Library are - he is, instead, something sort of in-between. He's very astral in nature and somewhat ghostly in his feel, but he is not connected to the Earth in the way a normal Fae might be, perhaps being linked to the cosmos. He doesn't mind the ambivalence - in fact, it seems that either he doesn't care, or he doesn't particularly care to explain it to a mortal. He's got other things to do, like sleep for eight hours straight.

Offering Suggestions

- labradorite, opalite, selenite, angel aura quartz, moonstone, tourmaline, shungite, rainbow carbide, aquamarine, kyanite, sodalite
- lapsang suochoong teas
- blueberries, raspberries, and strawberries
- anchovies and other small portions of fish
- pine, fir, lemongrass, and citrus scents
- scrying bowls and crystal balls, particularly darkly colored crystal balls like amethyst
- blue jolly ranchers or other brightly colored hard candies
- a nice cozy spot to snuggle up on

About Cait Sidhe

Pronounced "cat she," Cait Sidhe are mythologically known as a type of Fae that traditionally take the form of large black cats with white spots on the center of their chest. While I find that not all Cait Sidhe choose to take this physical form when manifesting to their companions, they do prefer darker color palettes and all share a mysterious, trickster, fae-like energy. They are highly energetic, and have a high proclivity for magic and divination. Additionally, they can be very playful and mischievous like their pure Fae brethren. They have a tendency to make the lights flicker, and if you have cats, it may be a good idea to set up some house rules so they are not disturbed by any Cait Sidhe you bring into your home.

About the Binding

This spirit's listing does not come with a vessel. Using the name and your energy imprint provided from the online purchase, I will perform a binding directly to you within 24 hours of your purchase. This is a quick, expedient, and immediate way to receive connection to your companion. Additionally, this form of binding does not require any kind of charging, and cannot be broken or lost. If you ever have a need to re-do your bindings for any reason, please let me know and I will gladly perform the service for you free of charge.

My bindings are done in a manner that specifically only provides energetic attachment to the spirit companion intended to be bound to you. It does not bind them to your will, and does not guarantee that they will come any moment you call for them. It functions in a similar way to a phone number - they will be notified when you want them or are thinking about them, and they may choose to arrive if they wish. If they do not come at a specific moment, they may arrive later. All spirits have been informed of and agree to standard house rules before being bound to you. Finally, beyond some basic protection and cloaking clauses in my bindings, the most important clause is that the spirit may easily break the binding if you becomes harmful or abusive, and vice versa.

Many people prefer a vessel binding because they appreciate the physical representation of their companion's presence in this world. In the case that you would like a vessel binding, you may choose one of the following two options:

- Purchase the "Vessel Add-On" listing from The Dragon's Library, giving your new companion an allowance to pick a vessel of their choosing.
- Send a photo of a vessel you already own to thedragonslibrary@gmail.com, and I will perform a distance binding for free.

Welcoming Ritual

If this is your first spirit companion, or if you are not quite sure how to welcome them to their new home, you may find comfort in this ritual. There is no requirement to perform the ritual, and it can be done at any time at any point after your binding is complete. Furthermore, it can be repeated over time, if you ever feel the need to strengthen your bond with your spirit companion.

1. Create a quiet space in your home. Light a few candles or some incense, dim the lights, and take a moment to calm yourself and notice how you are feeling today. Have an offering ready to present to your new companion.
2. Once you feel ready, visualize your companion in your mind's eye. Speak their name, out loud or in your mind. Pay attention to if you feel their presence. It may take a few minutes to really notice them. Once you get the inkling they are present, continue.
3. Present the offering. Say something along the lines of:
"Welcome, [Name]. I present you this offering as a gift to signify our new friendship. I welcome you into my home and my life, just as you welcome me into yours."

4. Feel free to continue saying a few words. Even if you can't feel or hear your spirit respond yet, it's good to lay down some house rules and your expectations.
5. Take a moment to sit quietly in each other's presence, acquainting your energies.
6. Once you are finished, thank them for coming. Put the offering in a safe spot.